

Closing Remark

»Movement teachings are not based on the facts which they appropriate, but on coming events. Their value lies not in the events which they illuminate, but in the shock effect of the events they anticipate. They have no effect on the consciousness, but directly on the course of events from which they obtain their energy. A clear distinction must be made between them and philosophical gymnastics and everything which is written in connection with the history of ideas.«

Johan Sjerpstra.